Customer Reviews

I read the whole book in a day and was incredibly inspired! The trio set up 10 different themed Ladies Drawing Nights to inspire you to start your own. Of course, I'm not Julia Rothman and I don't live in a cool Brooklyn loft and I'm not friends with Mary Kate McDevitt but there's a definite sense that this sort of activity is a great way to infuse creativity into your life, especially for folks who may be creative professionals but don't get a lot of opportunity to make things with their hands anymore. I particularly liked that they included images of the ladies' finished pieces and a list of the tools that they used as well as the overall projects. The 3D paperboard city project was a particularly clever idea too. The last two ladies nights were the least inspired: one was going out to a bar and the other was a kids night. While they are great ideas they were not as engaging as the projects earlier in the

Full of inspiration! Can't wait to get my own LDN going!
